Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Although I have scribbled down poems from time to time throughout my life, I found an old forgotten use of cipher, or hidden messages within both letters and verse going back hundreds of years. This was at the time a complete and utter accident. But it hinged two passions of mine, mathematics and poetry. Many years ago while sitting in a dental office waiting for my appointment. I picked up a magazine to read, and read an article about William Shakespeare. The article went into some detail of how Shakespeare would hide puns or messages in his letters using a cipher. He would construct his messages by the extraction of every thirteenth word or syllable. So that when each of the thirteenth was put together, there would be a hidden message revealed. Look back to the time of Shakespeare, there was no mail system as we know it. Envelopes were not invented until the 1800 s. There were no stamps. A letter was simply folded and sealed with melted wax; and the wax was stamped with the owners seal, hence the name or term stamp. Often letters were opened and read by anyone carrying them, so hidden codes to protect the true message were incorporated into many letters. I do not remember the magazine, and have never found a reference to this story again. But that doesn t really matter. What interested me was the thought of putting this concept to my poetry. I offer my own unique poetry. In the verse of the selected text titled Butterfly Cacoons, you will find note marks like this one in the text. These do not indicate footnotes...
